

Legend — green solid: built and exercised · green bold: built this session · amber dashed: specified, unreachable · red: does not exist

The two things that diagram makes obvious, which prose hid:

1. Log is the spine. Every arrow that matters terminates in it. The red light is derived from it, not raised by a process. That's the design working.
2. Gate is the only red box. Everything else is either built or merely unwired. The milestone gate is absent — and it's the one thing your completion requirements say nothing may be delivered without.